APCOM

The Asia Pacific Coalition on Male Sexual Health (APCOM) is a regional coalition of MSM and HIV community-based organisations and networks, the government sector, donors, technical experts and the UN system. The main purpose is advocating for political support and increases in investment and coverage of HIV services for males who have sex with males and transgenders in Asia and the Pacific. APCOM promotes the principles of good practice and lessons learnt by bringing together representatives from diverse groups in an effort to share experience, knowledge and expertise. The APCOM website includes additional resource materials including this report, policy briefs, commentaries, reports, news stories and APCOM membership registration.

Defining the term MSM in a South Asian context

“Men who have sex with men” (MSM) is an inclusive public health term used to define the sexual behaviours of males having sex with other males, regardless of gender identity, motivation for engaging in sex or identification with any or no particular ‘community’. The words ‘man’ and ‘sex’ are interpreted differently in diverse cultures and societies as well as by the individuals involved. As a result, the terms MSM covers a large variety of settings and contexts in which male to male sex takes place.

Caveat

This report does not claim to be the final authority on the extent of MSM groups, networks and organisations in the South Asia region. Many small groups will most likely have been missed because they are not registered, or they have not been mentioned by other groups and organisations that have been identified. However, the information provided here does give an indication of the development of these groups, networks and organisations. In 1990, only India has any sort of organising around male-male sexualities, and then it is estimated that there were less than 10 such organisations.

It needs to also be recognised that such organisations, groups and networks are organic, often rising and falling, and renewing themselves under different names, and that such listings are not static but evolutionary.

Mapping MSM groups, organisations and networks in South Asia

Introduction

According to a policy brief titled “The Value of Investing in MSM Programs in the Asia and the Pacific region”, developed by the USAID Health Policy Initiative and APCOM (March 2008), there is strong evidence establishing male-to-male sex as one of the driving forces of HIV transmission in the region. HIV prevalence among MSM and transgender populations ranges from 3 to 17% in Asia-Pacific countries¹ (5 to 15 times higher than overall HIV prevalence). In India, for instance, the latest estimates by National AIDS Control Organisation (NACO) show that prevalence among MSM and transgender populations was 5.7% in 2006 as against the overall adult of 0.36%².

Technical and funding support based on such evidence for large scale strategic interventions that address male-to-male and transgender sexualities and related HIV vulnerabilities is only now beginning to materlize in the region. One of the first steps needed in scaling up this response is to map the populations concerned and their representative groups, organisations and networks. This study carried out by India Naz Foundation International aimed at such a mapping of MSM groups, organisations and networks in the South Asian countries of Afghanistan, Bangladesh, Bhutan, Maldives, Mongolia, Nepal, Pakistan, India and Sri Lanka Mongolia has been included in the sub region at their request.³

The study focused on male who have sex with male populations, given that not enough known about their specific vulnerabilities to HIV and the response that is already under the way to address the vulnerabilities. More specifically, the study looked at;

- a. Creation of a database of groups, organisations and networks addressing HIV prevention, care, support and treatment issues of MSM population in South Asia.
- b. Assess the geographical spread and coverage of these groups, organisations and networks.
- c. Assess their current HIV response; and
- d. Assess their readiness for scaling up the response

The study covered both community-based organisations (CBOs) and other voluntary (and private sector) agencies to gain a comprehensive overview.⁴

Study process

The study was conducted by the knowledge unit of India Naz Foundation International, based in Lucknow, India.

As a first step, an excel database format was developed to lay out all information issues that needed investigation. Information for India was divided by the states and rest by country. Please see the Annexures for the data breakdown.

This was followed by a desk review (both internet based and otherwise) of research reports, programme reports, annual reports, policy documents, organisational brochures and other profile documents, and existing databases of government and non-government agencies involved in work on gender, sexuality, human rights, HIV and AIDS and other associated issues to identify MSM groups, networks and organisations. A significant proportion of the desk review utilised resources available in NFI's Resource Centre in its regional programme office also based in Lucknow. All the collected information through the desk review was verified for accuracy and updating through e-mails and telephone calls.

In many instances, the desk review revealed only contact information or incomplete data. A self-administered questionnaire was used to collect the missing information. The questionnaire was distributed through e-mail and post, and where needed, completed through telephone interviews.

The questionnaire was also posted on e-forums used by MSM and HIV and AIDS organisations, their support forums and other agencies working with them in South Asia. This allowed the capture of information as yet unavailable in print or on websites. Respondents to the questionnaire were asked to provide contact information of other groups, organisations and networks they knew about. This allowed for a snowball method of information collection. India NFI's partners and INFOSEM's partners within India and other Naz Foundation International's country partners and their extensive linkages with civil society and other agencies working with MSM in South Asia were instrumental in collecting additional hard-to-access data.

All e-mail postings were made through javed@nfi.net. In the final stage the data in the MSM Excel formats was edited and supplemented with a legend for easy reference to abbreviations used.

Study findings

1. Geographical location

A Total of 152 entries for groups, organisations and networks were mapped in India, and another 27 for the other countries (20 in Bangladesh, 152 in India, 1 in Mongolia, 14 in Nepal, 8 in Pakistan and 3 in Sri Lanka). No information was found for Afghanistan, Bhutan, Maldives and Punjab province in Pakistan accounted for most of the entries. In India only 21 of the 35 states and Union Territories had groups, organisations and networks engaged with MSM issues.

No information was found for 14 of the states and Union Territories: Andaman and Nicobar Islands, Arunachal Pradesh, Chandigarh, Chattisgarh, Dadar and Nagar Haveli, Daman and Diu, Himanchal Pradesh, Jammu and Kashmir, Kerala, Lakshdweep Islands, Meghalaya, Mizoram, Sikkim and Tripura. However a few groups and organisations in Delhi, Karnataka and Maharashtra also worked in some of the neighbouring states and Union Territories that do not figure in Table 1.⁵

⁵In fact in all the countries covered, several groups and organisations had operations in multi districts / states / divisions / provisions – a further indicator of an geographical spread of technical capacities for HIV response in relation to transgender populations.

In terms of the regional spread within India, more than 64% of the entries were from the eastern and southern states and Union Territories (24% and 40% respectively). Another 21% were from the northern and central regions, only 9% from the western region and 5% from the north-eastern states. Both overall and within regions, only a handful of states dominated. Andhra Pradesh and Tamil Nadu accounted for nearly all the entries in the southern region, while West Bengal and Orissa accounted for the most entries in the eastern region. Similarly, Maharashtra and Manipur dominated in their respective regions (the west and the north-east).

Looking at the data from India, there is a need to explore the reasons behind the relative numerical strength of entries in states like Andhra Pradesh, Karnataka, Maharashtra, Tamil Nadu, Uttar Pradesh and West Bengal. It is possible that the politically strong MSM movements and successful advocacy with government and other stakeholders in these states have played a role behind this strength. On the other hand, in Andhra Pradesh, Orissa, Rajasthan and Uttar Pradesh, recent increases in attention by the state governments (State AIDS Control Societies-SACS) towards HIV interventions for MSM and transgender people account for the higher number of entries.

2. Organisational structure of groups, organisations and networks mapped

Of the 152 Indian entries, 53 were NGOs, International NGOs, and private sector initiative and 99 were MSM CBOs. Most of these CBOs were located in Andhra Pradesh, Tamil Nadu, Uttar Pradesh, and West Bengal. Andhra Pradesh and Orissa mostly had NGOs working on HIV targeted interventions funded by respective SACS. In contrast, in the other countries put together, only 37% of the entries were those for CBOs.

India, and on a smaller scale, Sri Lanka, had the benefits of coalitions of agencies working with MSM, including kothis, hijras and other sexual minorities. For instance, NFI's South Asia partners network and INFOSEM (Indian Network for Sexual Minorities), along with India NFI. If managed well, these networks can be extremely effective vehicles for joint policy and advocacy work with governments and other key stakeholders. To a significant extent this has already been the experience in India, where these coalitions played a key role in development of the National AIDS Control Programme – Phase III policy and operational guidelines for targeted interventions for MSM and transgender populations.

3. Nature of HIV/AIDS services

In India, most groups and organisations mapped provided a basic HIV prevention package of awareness generation, condom promotion, STI treatment (mainly referrals) and HIV related counseling and testing (mainly referrals). The more experienced NGOs and CBOs also provided psych-social counseling, drop-in-centre services and access to water based lubricants, and were engaged in multi-stake holder advocacy for creating an enabling policy, legal and larger social environment. Many of these also had their own STI treatment clinics. Well researched BCC resources, along with HIV care, support and treatment referrals were less common.

The biggest gap appears to be addressing the non STI/HIV/AIDS needs of males who have sex with males, which play a crucial role in the development of an enabling environment, such as poverty reduction schemes, educational development, community building and other health concerns.

The more experienced agencies in India, Nepal and Sri Lanka have strong LGBT human rights campaigns, while in Bangladesh there has been significant work in subsidising in media and sexual health meet.

A provision of a basic package of STI/HIV/AIDS prevention, care, support and treatment services (including referrals linkages) seemed to be on par in all the countries covered, with significant variation in quality stands. India had most of the NGOs and CBOs involved in provision of HIV/AIDS trainings and other technical assistance towards capacity building.

4. Population served

Of the Indian entries, 65% worked exclusively with MSM (including male sex workers), while the remainder had a broader remit through composite programming, which included work with other at-risk populations, such as female sex workers, injecting drug users, truck drivers and migrant workers. In Bangladesh, Nepal and Sri Lanka, national MSM organisations focused on MSM and sexual health programming, others often had a broader remit. Whether the efficacy of an NGO or an MSM CBO approach is more effective in building sustained risk reduction strategies has, as yet, not been evaluated, although there is some evidence to indicate that peer led multi-levelled approaches appear to be the most effective.⁶

5. Training and funding needs

The most common training needs identified by Bangladesh, Nepal, Pakistan, and Sri Lanka agencies were resource mobilising, programme design and planning, and management. This was true of both CBOs and NGOs. The training needs most commonly expressed in India also included resource mobilising. The table below summarizes the most common needs for India.

Table 3: Most common training needs in India

Sr. No.	Training needs	No. of NGOs	No. of CBOs	Total
01	Counselling	2	6	8
02	Documentation	9	20	29
03	Fund Raising	30	19	49
04	HIV care, support, treatment	6	9	15
05	Communication	10	20	30
06	Advocacy	4	14	18
	Total	61	88	149

In terms of access to funding support, 47 of the Indian agencies (31%) mentioned receiving funding support for projects that catered to males who have sex with males populations (either exclusively or along with other target populations). But only 19% of these 47 agencies were CBOs.

Bangladesh and Nepal were relatively better off in terms of funding availability than Pakistan or Sri Lanka. Government funding was far more prominent in India than in other countries, where bilateral and multilateral agencies were major providers of funds.

Conclusions

The population of South Asia is approximately 1.6 billion people (more than China's 1.3 billion), and yet only 179 groups, networks and organizations providing HIV services for MSM were identified across the 9 countries. And of these, only 116 were MSM community-based organizations. This is grossly inadequate in terms of coverage, in a time of a growing HIV crisis among MSM,⁷ and where the demand is for universal access to HIV prevention, treatment, care and support services appropriate to the issues, needs and concerns of the broad diversity of MSM risks and vulnerabilities.

This inequity between need and service provision highlights the level of stigma and discrimination by a broad range of stakeholders, not only at institutional levels of government and donors, but also at state and local levels. It also highlights the urgent need to provide support for community development and mobilising of MSM to be able to respond more effectively to the HIV crisis. In fact, the lack of MSM coverage is itself a crisis. This means expanding the level of appropriate technical assistance and support, along with mentoring and capacity development for local groups and networks to mobilise around the issue of sexual health needs and concerns for their constituents.

Are we still in the dark days of “silence = death”?

Key recommendations

1. There is an urgent need to significantly and rapidly increase the number of agencies working with MSM and HIV prevention, treatment, care and support in South Asia, with an emphasis on underserved countries and regions within countries. This also means implementing the principles of good practice as developed at the Risks and Responsibilities: Male Sexual Health and HIV in the Asia and the Pacific International Consultation Meeting, held in New Delhi, India, September 2006, which identified that a key way forward for building sustainable risk reduction strategies was to mobilise networks of MSM to form their own service provision organisations and support them.
2. Community ownership and MSM leadership of the HIV response are important yardsticks of sustainability. On this score, civil society in the countries of the region have a significant way to go in order to achieve universal access. Within India, the relatively successful experience of community mobilisation and leadership in states like Andhra Pradesh, Delhi, Maharashtra, Tamil Nadu and West Bengal needs to be replicated on a large scale in other states. It should be noted that all the states mentioned have the advantages of a relatively supportive social environment and a head start of nearly two decades in community mobilisation. This experience cannot be repeated in other regions through mere facilitation of “CBO formation”. What would be needed is considerable investment in leadership through systematic training, mentoring, on-going support and funding.
3. Strengthening of the HIV and AIDS services package needs to include activities that have an “indirect” but significant impact on increasing the ability of MSM to protect themselves from HIV and other sexually transmitted infections, along with access to quality health services, through reducing their vulnerabilities and risks. These can include (but not limited to) psycho-social support to enhance self-esteem, income generation programmes and self help cooperative formations, vocational training and other educational activities, access to legal aid, and social security support. These services would make the response to HIV among and for males who have sex with males based on the recognition of their rights to dignity, health and life as equal citizens. This was universally recognised as a central requirement in all the countries covered in this report.
4. The vast majority of agencies identified in this report strongly believed that on-going technical assistance and support was urgently needed and sustained to provide capacity and skills building on community development, programme development, service delivery and resource development, along with advocacy skills, and that the current level of such assistance needs to be rapidly scaled up

5. There are several agencies in the region that provide a measure of technical assistance and support for MSM mobilising and community development towards self-help HIV service provision that are MSM led, such as Bandhu Social Welfare Society in Bangladesh, India NFI and INFOSEM in India, Blue Diamond Society in Nepal, Companions on a Journey, Sri Lanka, while regionally, there is Naz Foundation International.

However the provision of technical support and assistance tends to be based on an inadequate analysis of need, an ad-hoc approach, and at times, a competitive environment all of which reduces the effectiveness of such support. A coordinated approach to develop a detailed analysis of capacity building needs of both MSM and non-MSM agencies providing services, along with the need to urgently scale-up coverage and replicate good practice models would be more appropriate.

The urgent need for leadership skills, and the milestones/good practices achieved by the agencies mapped in this report should be taken into account in this analysis. This analysis should be followed up with a coordinated effort at resource mobilising to provide long term and target oriented training, mentoring and support to the agencies concerned as well as new ones that need to emerge.

6. It would also be useful to be able to have information on donor support, not only in terms of financial extent, but as to who is funding what. A mapping of donor support could be an excellent advocacy tool.

Mapping of MSM groups, organisations and networks in South Asia – 2008

To

Date:

Dear

Greetings from India Naz Foundation International.

The Asia Pacific Colation on Male Sexual Health (APCOM) has appointed India NFI to undertake a mapping of the men who have sex with men groups, organisations and networks addressing issues of HIV/AIDS prevention, care, support and treatment in South Asia. The countries to be covered for the study are Afghanistan, Bangladesh, Bhutan, India, Maldives, Mongolia, Nepal, Pakistan and Sri Lanka. This study is expected to contribute to increased networking and coordination among MSM initiatives in South Asia and scale up their response to the HIV epidemic.

We would be grateful if you can spare some of your valuable time and fill the enclosed questionnaire on the profile of your agency and its HIV related activities.

An early response by September 20th 2008 at javed@nfi.net would be appreciated. You can also send us the filled up questionnaire by post at India NFI, 8 Gulzar Colony, New Berry Lane, Lucknow-226001, India. If you receive this letter by post, a self-addressed stamped envelope would be enclosed which you can use for sending us the questionnaire.

Please feel free to contact us if there is any clarification you need.

Yours sincerely
